

Clarification in Relation to Co-Authorship

As mentioned in the brochure of National Seminar on Consumer Protection to be held on February 19-20, 2016, at National Law University Delhi, it is further clarified that co-author is also required to pay the registration charges and no certificate of participation/paper presentation will be given to authors/co-authors in absentia.

Therefore, in case, the paper is written in co-authorship, both the authors are needed to register and participate to secure the certificate of participation/paper presentation.
