FOREWORD

Global trends in empirical legal research suggest that the most prominent law teaching institutions now place significant emphasis on the application of empirical methods in legal research. However, legal research in India has not kept up with this development. The orientation of candidates intending to pursue Ph.D in research skills is far from being satisfactory. In LL.M programmes, research methodology despite being a core course remains inadequately addressed. This is despite the fact that research skills are recognized as one of the core requirements for law students. The main predicament in this direction is noted to be the lack of right kind of training on the part of students and researchers. Most law schools now have LL.M and Ph.D programmes. However, there is often a lack of clear cut scheme, guidance, material and competence in the entire process of undertaking, guiding, and evaluating research programmes. There is scarcely any concise and agreeable material available which could help the researchers in planning and execution of their research in an efficient manner. This situation has largely fostered an attitude of indifference among students towards research assignments. Resultantly the overarching objective of promoting a culture of research in law schools remains an unattended target.

True to its mission, the National Law University, Delhi (NLUD) places considerable importance on Empirical Legal Research (ELR) and aspires to be identified as a world class research university. In pursuance of these objectives, the NLUD, in the recent past, has undertaken several initiatives including the organization of specific workshops on empirical legal research methods and has trained a large number of teachers across the country to be able to emphasise research skills among students.

In the same vein, it was considered that NLUD may develop a reference handbook for simplifying the process of undertaking research assignments at LL.M and doctoral levels. I am delighted to introduce this 'Research Handbook' for LL.M dissertation and Ph. D Thesis writing'. This is an endeavour to offer a quick and efficient structuring and formatting of research reports. The Handbook provides a idea as to developing a good synopsis and choosing the right frame to structure of the research. Separate designs for doctrinal and non-doctrinal research are lucidly presented with lot many tips and easy pointers. Concise and crisp, it offers useful illustrations and sample writings to understand the application of research method in realistic way. Further, it has many standard templates to bring uniformity in structuring project reports in terms of proper shaping of the cover page, contents and other parts. An easy to understand account of citation is also the key highlight of this publication.

I am confident that this modest effort of NLUD would bring much-needed standardization in the whole process of writing of LL.M dissertation and Ph.D thesis by the students. I expect students to make its fullest possible use. I also welcome suggestions from all quarters to further improve this publication.

Using the Handbook

The Handbook in your hands is a ready reference as to how to handle various research assignments given to the a law student as part of the curriculum. This Handbook is an answer for the following exercises:

1. Writing synopsis for doctrinal/non-doctrinal¹ research project
2. Planning and execution of non-doctrinal or empirical research project
3. Writing the report for non-doctrinal or empirical research project
4. Learning about the style and application of citation
5. Writing synopsis for doctrinal research project
6. Planning and execution of doctrinal research project
7. Writing the report for doctrinal research
8. Writing research proposal
9. Adherence to the format – structure, spacing, presentation and following the correct sequencing
10. Applying the templates given for perfecting the component wise research writing
11. Understanding and applying a suitable framework for analysing the cases and undertaking case analysis

¹The term doctrinaire or non-doctrinaire is also used. However, this Handbook relied on doctrinal and non-doctrinal terminology as the same is found to be widely prevalent and internationally used and accepted.

Guidelines for Writing Research Report

The Project Report writing as an essential part of B.A. LL. B. (Hons.) & LL. M. levels require to follow a definite research design. The choice of research design and method of research in law is based on the nature of research, content and other parameters. Broadly speaking, the research undertaken by the students could be of two kinds: doctrinal and non-doctrinal. A doctrinal research means a study that has been carried out on a legal proposition or propositions by way of analyzing the existing statutory provisions and cases by applying the reasoning power. Doctrinal research involves analysis of case law, arranging, ordering and systematizing legal propositions and study of legal institutions through legal reasoning or rational deduction. The method applied in this kind of study is qualitative and it is also known as non-empirical research as it is based on secondary sources. Empirical research is an inquiry that attempts to discover and verify general rules allowing us to understand why human beings or events behave the way they do. The methods like observation, interview, questionnaire, survey and case study are used to discover the human conduct. Socio-legal research is the best example of empirical or non-doctrinal research.

While very precise guidelines are provided in the next section to guide the students very generally in applying appropriate research methods, the students are advised to consult standard books to further explore these aspects. Besides, some peculiar research may need specific methodology or a combination of methods suggested in this section. In all such cases, the candidate may seek specific guidance from the concerned teacher/ supervisor to approach the problem.

Guidelines for Writing Empirical Research Report

Title

The title especially, in empirical project should, reflect the focus of research problem in specific terms. Avoid writing too broad and general title like 'Crime against women in India' instead it, depending upon the focus, may be like: 'Domestic Violence against Working Women in the Districts of Indore & Bhopal of M.P.'

Structure of Project Report

If the candidate is to write the synopsis or proposal for research, the structure suggested below may be followed and use future or simple present tense (e.g. ...the present study examines...../or the present study will examine...). If the candidate has completed the research and is writing the report past tense should be used which is suitable to report the findings made by the researcher/ scholar. (e.g. the research found that....).

The research proposal / synopsis / or the report may be organised in the following manner:

1. Introduction

State a brief background and introduce the subject in few paragraphs or pages; it should not be directly lifted from the original source. Make your arguments and adopt an analytical tone to place the problem under investigation in a context.

Review of Literature

It is a survey of juristic writings on the chosen topic. Consult the literature viz; articles, books, reports, cases, monographs, data bases on the broad theme to highlight:

- general development in the field [ascending order in terms of year of publications];
- noteworthy contribution in the field expressed through various writings;
- connect and place the proposed subject of study in literature review to highlight its relevance.

2. Present Study

A. Statement of the Problem: (At least 200 words)

Clearly state the problem to be undertaken. Make a clear statement/narrative highlighting the exact coverage and purview of the problem under investigation. Make a mention of the issues, which would be actually investigated in the research. The key issues about the problem in theoretical and applied context of the concerned discipline should be specified. The specific aim of the project, its rationale, including the rationale of the approach adopted for studying the problem should be specifically mentioned. (Refer to Annexure – X for template).

B. Conceptual Context:

There may be concepts, propositions and doctrines in the proposed study, which need to be defined for the purpose of the study in hand. Make operational definitions of all such usages.

The scholar is expected in this section to introduce and contextualize the 'general research area'. Such contextualization is to provide the researcher an opportunity to link a specific social and legal problem to a body of socio-legal theory.

3. Methodology :

A. Objectives :

State categorically the measurable objectives (preferably not more than five) of the research to be undertaken. Example:

1. To study the available infrastructure and manpower to enforce labour law in the city of Chandigarh.
2. To examine the factors (social and economic) in child labour etc.

B. Hypothesis/ Research questions :

Make crisp statements (e.g. one each for all objectives) entailing not more than two variables describing the presumed relationship or influence on each other ('length of experience of judge is positively linked with his capacity to dispose the cases', 'relaxation in regulatory mechanism in international trade sector caused a spurt in economic crimes'). Additionally or alternatively, research questions may also be framed to investigate the issues slated for the research. Hypotheses are advisable where the researcher has fairly good idea of issues, concepts and their relevance to the proposed research.

Research questions could be helpful where the researcher does not have sufficient idea of the work done in that area or the nature of issues under research are only evolving. Example:

- Does child labour has anything to do with the education? or;
- Does the type of parenting has any association with the indulgence of a child in to labour situation?
- (c) Coverage & Scope : The duration or number of cases and nature of cases studied; or any geographical region (city, villages etc.) or any institution (like case study of Economic Offence Wing etc.) studied.
- (d) Sample : normally in non-doctrinal studies. Mention the sampling method used.
- (e) Data Collection : All kinds of research (doctrinal or non-doctrinal) require some kind of data. Make a mention of sources and nature of data collected and utilized in the report. It may include the following :

Primary Data collection

If the study involves data collection from the respondents, following is the scheme:

- Universe of the study (state the source/estimated number of total population of units)
- Sampling design (method of sampling to extract the required number of sample)
- Tools used (the ways to collect the required data like interview schedule, questionnaire, participant observation, case study)
- Techniques (any scale, measurement etc.)
- Statistical consideration/ software applications.

Nature of data that are proposed to be collected should be specifically mentioned. The sources for each type of data and the tools and techniques that will be used for collecting different types of data should also be specifically mentioned. For questionnaire and/or interview schedule to be used, the following should be indicated:

- (a.) Nature and coverage of the questionnaire or interview schedule to be used for different sections of respondents.
- (b.) Number of questions to be asked from each respondent
- (c.) Scaling technique proposed to be included, if any
- (d.) Projective tests incorporated in the questionnaire/interview schedule, if any

- (e.) Coding plan (e.g., whether the questions/ responses/ items will be pre-coded or not; if coding is required, mention whether it is to be done in computer or manually)
- (f.) In case, interview technique is being adopted, please mention about how they are to be conducted, including the particular characteristics of the interviews/ interviewers
- (g.) In case of observation technique, mention type of observation, participants, quasi-participants, non-participants; units of observation; or other techniques, if any.

If the study requires any control groups, these should be specifically mentioned therein.

Secondary Data collection (Both non-doctrinal and doctrinal study)

- Mention of Secondary sources used-library resources/reports consulted/ internet resources used.
- Case studies.
- Case laws/judgments.
- Content analysis/document analysis/Meta-analysis.

4. Data Analysis Plan:

Data analysis could be manually or electronically. The use of IBM SPSS Statistics can be made to analyse the data collected from the respondents.

Refer to any particular qualitative/quantitative techniques which would be used in this study.

5. Significance of the study

Clearly state as to what theoretical, pragmatic and policy contribution would be made by the study. Make at least four to five substantial statements in this section¹.

6. References

Follow the standard referencing and citation (Follow the 'Blue Book citation style')

¹Keep the tense in mind; if writing a proposal use future tense and if writing the report, use the past tense.

Guidelines for Doctrinal Research Report

Doctrinal research is a qualitative enquiry. The choice and coverage of doctrinal legal research could be very expansive and it is tough to suggest any fixed format for this kind of research. This is mainly due to the reasons that this kind of research involves research problem requiring highly individualized rather than standard methodology. For instance, the research involving case study method or focusing on case analysis including case comment may have little different frame to follow.

The research involving jurisprudential analysis of an issue, analysis of statute, historical or comparative growth of any legal doctrine or legal system, examination of any legal concept through case laws or legal theories, regulatory issues in corporate or IPR regimes, locating and weighing an idea in the constitutional context or human rights context, enforcement issues in various jurisdictions, international laws affecting the relevant domestic issue etc. are some examples of some broad areas of research which are possible through doctrinal research design.

Steps for Doctrinal Design

1. Introduction

State a brief background and introduce the subject in few paragraphs or pages; it should not be directly lifted from the original source. Make your arguments and adopt an analytical tone to place the problem under investigation in a perspective.

2. Conceptual context

There may be concepts, propositions and doctrines in the proposed study, which need to be defined for the purpose of the study in hand. Make operational definitions of all such usages.

The scholar in this section is expected to introduce and contextualize the 'general research area'. Such contextualization is to provide the researcher an opportunity to link a specific social and legal problem to a body of socio-legal theory.

3. Review of literature

It is a survey of juristic writings on the chosen topic.

Consult the literature including articles, books, reports, cases, monographs, data bases) on the broad theme to highlight:

- general development in the field [ascending order in terms of year of publications];
- noteworthy contribution in the field expressed through various writings;
- connect and place the proposed subject of study in literature review to highlight its relevance.

4. Statement of research problem

Clearly state the problem to be undertaken. Make a clear statement/narrative highlighting the exact coverage and purview of the problem under investigation. Make a mention of the issues, which would be actually investigated in the research. The key issues about the problem in theoretical and applied context of the concerned discipline should be specified. The specific aim(s) of the project, its rationale, including the rationale of the approach adopted for studying the problem should be specifically mentioned. (Refer to annexure – X for template).

5. Formulation of objectives

State categorically the objectives (preferably not more than five) of the research to be undertaken. The objective to be stated sharply entailing the key issues to be examined (Annexure – XI).

6. Framing hypothesis / research questions

Hypothesis in doctrinal research must be framed to address of the prescribed objectives of the study. The hypothesis must depict the interplay of key issues, emerging debates, conflicting notions and evolving trends in the subject. Alternatively, research questions may be formed and these questions must lead the researcher to examine a definite body of literature, cases and publications etc.

7. Sampling procedures

The researcher to focus on the following-

- Choice of setting.
- Choice of key informants.
- Choice of study groups and events.
- Choosing the setting, the event and the respondent(s) to be addressed first, events and respondents will change as research progresses.

8. Tools for data collection

- Depending upon the subject the researcher can apply various tools like case study, case law analysis, analytical induction, constant comparison, textual analysis, content analysis etc. (Visit... <http://psychsoma.co.za/files/15methods.pdf>)

9. Data collection / Analysis

- Data collection and its analysis in a doctrinal study goes together where the identical information is combined from various sources to evolve certain patterns, categories and concepts. Under the teacher's supervision, following scheme may be tried.
- Entering the setting, data gathering and open coding; examining and comparing the data; drawing inferences from the data, leading to identification of concepts; adding new data; refining concepts.
- Axial coding; integrating/re-integrating data and constructing categories. Inter-connecting, contextualizing categories, giving attention to causes and consequences; adding new data; comparing categories, formulating propositions².
- Selective coding; identifying the core category, relating it to other categories, validating their relationships, and further refining and developing them.
- Testing propositions/ hypotheses; theoretical saturation; leading to theory Recording and organizing data³.

Secondary Data collection

- Mention of Secondary sources used - library resources/reports consulted/ internet resources used.
- Case studies.
- Case laws/judgments.
- Content analysis/document analysis/Meta-analysis.

²Applicable in selected case where a rigid / fixed research design is contemplated.

³Sarantakos, S. (1998). Social Research Australia, Mac Millan Publisher Pvt. Ltd. (2nd Ed).

10. Data analysis and interpretation are to be placed in various sections of the report.

- Analyzing data by grouping the information and developing new categories.
- Assigning meanings to the narratives.
- Testing hypotheses.

11. Conclusions and Recommendations

- This section must indicate the broad conclusions of the study. Also suggest major recommendations for improvement of the situation.

Doing Doctrinal Analysis

- Assembling relevant facts
- Identifying the legal issues
- Analysing the issues with a view to searching for the law
- Reading background material (including legal dictionaries, legal
- Locating primary material (including legislation, delegated legislation and case law
- Synthesising all the issues in context
- Coming to a tentative conclusion

Steps in Doctrinal Research Report

1. Introduction (context and general background)
2. Literature review
3. Statement of research problem.
4. Objectives
5. Hypotheses/research question.
6. Data Collection (Identification of material and cases etc)
7. Data analysis (content analysis case study, case analysis, meta analysis, constant comparison analytical induction.

BLOCK QUOTATIONS [Rule B 12]

Block Quotations

Quotations of fifty or more words should be single spaced, indented left and right, justified, and without quotation marks. This is known as a block quotation. Quotation marks within a block quotation should appear as they do in the original. The citation following a block quotation should not be indented but should begin at the left margin on the line following the quotation, as shown in this example:

[T]his presumptive privilege must be considered in light of our historic commitment to the rule of law. This is nowhere more profoundly manifest than in our view that “the twofold aim [of criminal justice] is that guilt shall not escape or innocence suffer.” We have elected to employ an adversary system of criminal justice in which the parties contest all issues before a court of law. . . . To ensure that justice is done, it is imperative to the function of courts that compulsory process be available for the production of evidence needed either by the prosecution or by the defense.

United States v. Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 708—09 (1974)

(citation omitted). The Court then balanced this interest against the evils of forced disclosure. Id. at 710.

Consult rule 5 for guidance concerning other aspects of quotation, including omissions and alterations from original quoted material.

INTRODUCTORY SIGNALS [Rule 1.2]

(a) Signals that indicate support.

[no signal]	Cited authority (i) directly states the proposition, (ii) identifies the source of a quotation, or (iii) identifies an authority referred to in the text. Use “[no signal],” for example, when directly quoting an authority or when restating numerical data from an authority.
E.g.,	Cited authority states the proposition; other authorities also state the proposition, but citation to them would not be helpful or is not necessary. “E.g.” may also be used in combination with other signals, preceded by a comma: See, e.g., But see, e.g.,
Accord	“Accord” is commonly used when two or more sources state or clearly support the proposition, but the text quotes or refers to only one; the other sources are then introduced by “accord.” Similarly, the law of one jurisdiction may be cited as being in accord with the law of another.

See	Cited authority clearly supports the proposition. "See" is used instead of "[no signal]" when the proposition is not directly stated by the cited authority but obviously follows from it; there is an inferential step between the authority cited and the proposition it supports.
See also	Cited authority constitutes additional source material that supports the proposition. "See also" is commonly used to cite an authority supporting a proposition when authorities that state or directly support the proposition already have been cited or discussed. The use of a parenthetical explanation of the source's relevance (rule 1.5) following a citation introduced by "see also" is encouraged.
Cf.	Cited authority supports a proposition different from the main proposition but sufficiently analogous to lend support. Literally, " cf. " means "compare." The citation's relevance will usually be clear to [he reader only if it is explained. Parenthetical explanations (rule 1.5), however brief, are therefore strongly recommended.

Template For Writing A Statement Problem

1.	Start with a general problem identifying the need for the study. E.g. The problem of this study is _____
2.	State the specific problem proposed for research. (use citation & usually a number to make it clear to the reader, e.g. 30% of the farms have been affected by the Napier grass disease)
3.	Introductory words describing Methodological approach (i.e. Research Design) are given and are appropriate to the specific proposal problem, e.g. this qualitative study will explore... or this quantitative study will examine ...
4.	General population group of proposed study is identified. Small scale farmers in affected locations will be surveyed to determine...

Annexure - XII

A Model / Sample for Writing the Statement of Problem, Objectives, Hypothesis and Research Design etc.

Statement of Problem:

The present study intended to focus upon the issues and problems relating to witnesses of certain criminal offences. With the help of a doctrinal and, non-doctrinal method, the proposed exercise attempted to know as to why and in what circumstances the witnesses turn hostile. Are there any specific factors, which induce hostility of a witnesses? Do the incidents of cooperation or hostility tend to vary along the types and characteristics of witness? A systematic probe in to some of these questions has been made in the study. Besides, the study also endeavoured to find as to what are the key problems that the witness faces in his interaction with police, prosecution and court officials. The issues of hostility and protection have been examined in the light of significant judgments. The perceptions of witnesses on several crucial aspects have also been studied to project a comprehensive picture of the issue under study. Finally, the study also took a critical view of the need for witness protection and the suggestions made by certain bodies have been subjected to a critical review. The study has been geared by the key assumption that without resolving the basic issues and problems being faced by witnesses, their co-operation can not be elicited for the purpose of a free and fair trial.

Objectives:

- The study was geared to achieve the following objectives:
- To outline the relevant legal provisions pertaining to witness
- To examine the issue of hostility of witness and the emerging debates on the issue especially in the light of leading judgments of courts and other publications.
- To study the experiences and problems of witnesses in their interaction with police, prosecution and court.
- To critically review the idea of witness protection in the light relevant legal provisions.

- To study the profile of witnesses in the chosen states.
- To identify the causes for the reluctance of people being witness to a criminal incident in the context of the characteristics of the witnesses.
- To survey the perceptions and attitudes of witnesses on certain matters relevant to this study.

Hypotheses:

The following hypotheses would be examined in this study:

1. The chief factors in the reluctance of witness are those relating to fear of criminal assault, harassment by the police and court and anticipatory loss of degradation of social status.
2. The persons from lower medium income groups and average education category are more likely to be the witnesses.
3. The hardships of witnesses are normally associated with police behaviour.
4. The witnesses experience considerable problems in the court.
5. Loss of faith in the criminal justice agencies is a factor discouraging the witnesses to come forward.
6. Witnesses do face pressures from influential sectors affecting their testimony.
7. The chances of manipulation and resulted hostility of witnesses are often seen in cases where the rich and powerful elements are involved.

Research Design:

In accordance with the objectives of the present study, doctrinal and non-doctrinal research designs have been adopted. The doctrinal design has been used to study the jurisprudential development in the areas of hostility, protection and problems of witnesses. This has been done primarily with the help of case laws and leading judgments of various courts. The reports of committees and commissions have been scanned to sifting the issues relating to the research problem.

The non-doctrinal method or empirical approach is the prime highlight of this study. In this pursuit, a sample survey has been carried out to collect the required data by using some structured methods of data collection.

Sample & Locale of the Study:

In order to attain the suggested objectives, the witnesses relating to various types of criminal offences have been included in this study. They include:

- (i) Theft
- (ii) Personal violence
- (iii) Robbery
- (iv) Dacoity
- (v) Attempted murder/murder
- (vi) Rape

To have a suitable geo-cultural mix of the region, it was intended to have four districts one each from the states i.e. Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Maharashtra, Karnataka. After the pilot study, it was decided to conduct the study on the capitals of the concerned State. A sample of two hundred from each state was proposed to be taken. The actual total sample size in the study was seven hundred and ninety eight (N=798). Several procedures of sampling were considered. It was indeed difficult to have a pre decided list of witnesses and then to contact them accordingly was practically difficult. Therefore, the study was conducted in an open setting. The research team would visit the court premises to contact the witnesses concerning the cases (according to the pre decided offences). This schedule was repeated daily until the desired number from each state was targeted. Though it was not always easy to contact and interview the witness waiting in the court premises, as the lawyers initially did not cooperate. Eventually, they were convinced and the research team received ample of help from them. The experiences in all the selected states were different. In order to meet the local demands like language etc. investigators were employed from the same region. Infact the witnesses used to have lot of free time after turning up to the court and hence the long interview did not face any problem.

Tools for Data collection:

An Interview Schedule for collecting necessary information from the respondents was devised. As far as possible, all the items kept closed ended so that the respondents could easily answer. The aspects relating to the objectives of the study were properly included. A team of research investigators was deployed to contact the witnesses for eliciting requisite information. The job of data collection was accomplished with the help of local research investigators specially engaged for this purpose.

In addition to it, informal discussions with lawyers, prosecutors, police officials and judicial officers were held to gain insight into various aspects of the problem.

Data Analysis:

The collected data from the respondents were subjected to editing and a coding plan was carried out to facilitate electronic data processing. The data was processed through Statistical Package for Social Sciences (IBM SPSS Statistics 21). A tabulation plan suiting to the scheme of this study was worked out.

Findings & Observations

The key conclusions of this study are presented below:

1. Majority of the respondents in this study (61.7 percent) found the adjournments to be quite frequent. This perception was largely shared by respondents in Rajasthan (19.3 percent) followed by Karnataka (16.7 percent). The highest number of respondents not subscribing to this view came from Maharashtra (12.7 percent) whereas the lowest number in this category came from Rajasthan (0.9 percent).
2. The data reveal that almost 65 percent witness had to appear more than once before the court for testimony while 35.2 percent could do so in the first hearing only.
