

NATIONAL LAW UNIVERSITY, DELHI
CENTRE FOR COMMUNICATION GOVERNANCE

Sector-14, Dwarka, New Delhi

CALL FOR RESEARCHER

The Centre for Communication Governance at the National Law University, Delhi (CCG) invites applications for hiring a researcher for a particular project on an aspect of Internet Policy.

About the Centre

Centre for Communication Governance is a research centre within National Law University, Delhi, and is the first of its kind in India. Over the course of two years, CCG has established itself as a leading, credible organization for research in the field of information law and policy. The Centre routinely works with a range of international academic institutions and policy organizations. These include the Berkman Center at Harvard University, the Programme in Comparative Media Law and Policy at the University of Oxford, the Center for Internet and Society at Stanford Law School, the Global Freedom of Expression & Information Jurisprudence Project at Columbia University, the Hans Bredow Institute at the University of Hamburg, Freedom House, Access Now and the Global Network of Interdisciplinary Internet & Society Research Centers. We engage regularly with government ministries such as the Ministry of Communications & IT and the Ministry of Law & Justice and work actively to provide the executive and judiciary with useful in the course of their decision making on issues relating to civil liberties and technology.

About the Project & the Role

The Centre is looking for a researcher to undertake an urgent project on international law on a particular aspect of Internet policy. The project needs to be completed within a period of 4 weeks from the start of the assignment.

CCG's projects are designed to build competence and raise the quality of discourse in research and policy around issues concerning civil liberties and the Internet, cyber security and Global Internet Governance. The work output is intended to catalyze effective, research-led policy making and informed public debate around issues of technology and Internet governance.

Qualifications

The Centre welcomes applications from candidates with a Masters Degree in International Law.

All candidates must be able to provide evidence of an interest in civil liberties and human rights. In addition, they must have a demonstrable capacity for high-quality, independent work.

Remuneration

Based on the quality of the work, the remuneration will be up-to Rs. 40,000.

Procedure for Application

Interested applicants are required to send the following information and materials by 6 March 2016 to registrarnlud@nludelhi.ac.in. Applications must also be marked to ccg@nludelhi.ac.in.

1. Curriculum Vitae (maximum 2 pages).

2. Contact details for two referees (one academic). Referees must be informed that they might be contacted for an oral reference or a brief written reference.
3. One academic writing sample of between 1000 and 1200 words (essay or extract, published or unpublished).
4. Shortlisted applicants may be called for an interview.