About the Course

Transnational dispute resolution covers both substantive and procedural aspects of cross-border disputes. It operates across various forums, including national courts, ad hoc tribunals, and permanent international courts. Key issues include forum non conveniens, choice of law, enforcement of foreign judgments, and cross-border evidence. It also includes investment arbitration, conciliation, and other ADR mechanisms.

Transnational commercial law refers to rules governing international commercial transactions, drawn from conventions, treaties, domestic laws, and commercial customs. Unlike international economic law, which focuses on state relations, this area concerns private law and cross-border dealings between private parties. Familiarity with these principles is essential for legal professionals navigating today's globalised practice.

The growing movement of goods and people across borders has led to a rise in disputes involving foreign elements. While ADR methods like arbitration and mediation are increasingly preferred, litigation continues to play a key role—both in supervising ADR and serving as a default forum where parties cannot agree on alternative mechanisms.

Private international law determines how courts handle disputes with foreign elements, helping resolve questions like where to sue, which law applies, and how judgments from one jurisdiction are recognized in another.

About the Course

In principle, Private International Law (PIL) forms a part of each country's national legal system. However, several international institutions work towards codifying and harmonizing PIL rules through supranational regimes. While this course focuses primarily on the key features of India's private international law framework, students will also explore PIL issues across various fields such as contracts, torts, and family law.

Particular attention will be given to the work of key international bodies such as the Hague Conference on Private International Law, UNCITRAL, and UNIDROIT, along with the growing influence of European Union institutions in shaping and implementing PIL rules.

A key contemporary challenge for Private International Law is the impact of digitalisation. With individuals using cloud services hosted abroad, communicating globally, and investing in decentralized digital assets like cryptocurrencies, new legal questions arise: Which law applies to assets without a clear location? How should courts handle online defamation with a global audience? Can technology, such as international video conferencing, be used to streamline cross-border proceedings? These are some of the pressing questions the course will address.

Course Objectives and Learning Outcomes

This course aims to provide students with a strong conceptual foundation in Private International Law (PIL), with a particular emphasis on the Indian legal framework and its interaction with global developments. Students will explore how different legal systems address cross-border disputes and the role of PIL in an increasingly interconnected world shaped by globalisation, privatisation, and liberalisation.

The course will focus on three core aspects of Indian PIL: jurisdiction, choice of law, and the recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments. Through case studies and comparative analysis, students will engage with how Indian courts handle disputes involving foreign elements and how foreign legal systems are interpreted and applied within Indian courts.

In addition, students will be introduced to major international and regional developments in the field, including the work of institutions such as the Hague Conference on Private International Law, UNCITRAL, UNIDROIT, and the European Union.

The course will encourage students to consider the social and cultural dimensions of PIL and its practical application in a globalised legal environment.

Upon successful completion, students will be able to:

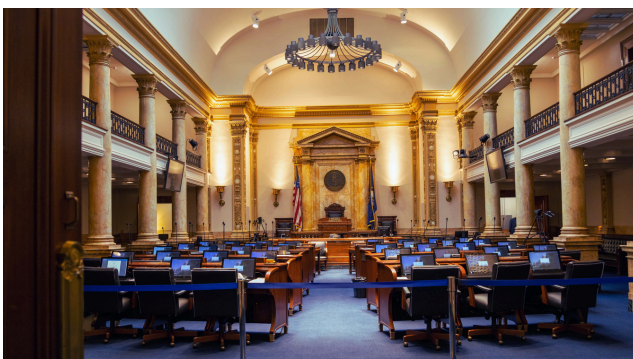

- Understand key differences between global legal systems.
- Analyse core principles of PIL and their links to globalisation, privatisation, and liberalisation.
- Gain familiarity with international PIL frameworks and institutions (Hague Conference, UNCITRAL, UNIDROIT, EU).
- Assess PIL issues from comparative, international, and socio-cultural perspectives.
