DESCRIPTION OF THE STUDY

The study is a supply-side institutional capacity assessment of justice delivery in India, with a focus on civil and commercial jurisdictions. Commissioned by the Department of Justice, Ministry of Law & Justice, Government of India, in collaboration with UNDP India and designed and executed by NLU Delhi, it examines the efficiency, accessibility, infrastructure, digital adoption, inclusivity and governance of courts, legal services authorities and allied justice institutions. Using a six-pillar diagnostic framework and a mixed-methods design across 12 states and 24 districts — including 2,000 survey respondents, 60 key informant interviews, 6 regional focus group discussions, 36 facility assessments and case-file review — the study will identify bottlenecks in justice delivery and propose practical, scalable reforms aligned with SDG 16.3.
